

SANTA LUCIA PRESERVE

OVERVIEW

The Santa Lucia Preserve (The Preserve) in Carmel, California is the only private community to have just 300 homesites situated within 20,000 acres of permanently and privately protected natural California wildlands, approximately the size of Manhattan.

Conservancy:

Nestled in the Santa Lucia Hills on the Monterey Peninsula in California, The Preserve is a community with a perpetually endowed 18,000-acre nature conservancy encompassing one of the most biodiverse and threatened areas in the world. The Preserve supports a rich mosaic of coastal habitats that are globally recognized as a great biodiversity “hotspot” – one of only six found in the United States. Every day, the Santa Lucia Conservancy is actively protecting the land by ensuring healthy ecosystems, studying the wildlife and habitats and connecting people to nature through a variety of educational programs for children and adults. The Conservancy is a non-profit land trust with a Board of Governors representing scientists, conservation experts and Preserve landowners. Its grasslands restoration program uses cutting-edge techniques to manage livestock in a manner that supports native grassland ecosystems and to reduce the risk of damaging wildfires.

Homes/Development:

Embracing the values of conservation, community and culture, The Preserve’s development footprint comprises just 2,000 acres, including homes, homesites, golf course, clubs, 100 miles of trails and operations, and more. Homes custom-designed and built by owners feature unique and often award-winning architecture in a wide variety of home styles built to fit into the landscape. Green design and sustainable building are highly encouraged.

The Lifestyle:

Welcoming a variety of lifestyles and ages, The Preserve’s engaged and active community is enhanced by a nationally ranked top 100 golf course, The Preserve Golf Club (according to Golf Digest), a premier multi-discipline equestrian center and three private dining venues - Hacienda, Golf Clubhouse and Polo Pools - featuring regional wines paired with the local and organic cuisine of Executive Chef Jerry Register.
