

Villa del Palmar Beach Resort & Spa at The Islands of Loreto is Perfect Venue for Whale Watching

Whale Watching Photo Safari Package Set for Feb. 4-9

LORETO, Baja California South, Mexico (Jan. 15, 2019) — Want to get so close to gray whales that you can literally touch them, or take in the beauty of the blue whale, the world’s largest existing animal? Villa del Palmar Beach Resort & Spa at The Islands of Loreto, featuring incredible views and access to the Sea of Cortez, can coordinate a once-in-a-lifetime experience that will help guests commune up close with nature.

As prime whale watching season continues now through mid- to late March, the resort’s activities desk assists in booking tours that offer breathtaking views of pods of migrating blue whales, as well as sightings of humpbacks and greys. Moreover, the resort has scheduled a unique Whale Watching Photo Safari package that provides guests with an opportunity to win valuable prizes when they submit photos from their exhilarating whale-watching excursions.

Priced at $818 (USD) per person, for 5 nights, and available Feb. 4-9, the package includes a:

- Five-night stay in a deluxe suite;
- Whale training session;
- Whale watching tour at Magdalena Bay;
- Beach party with a buffet dinner; and
- Seafood dinner at Danzante Restaurant.

After Villa del Palmar guests have completed their whale-watching excursion, they may upload their favorite photos to the property’s Facebook Fan Page from March 15 to 22. Once all the photos have been uploaded from guests who participated in the Photo Safari package, fan voting takes place from March 23 to 31. The three photos with the most “likes” will win the contest’s top prizes:

- First place: Four-night, five-day stay for two adults at the resort (European plan)
- Second place: Two-night, three-day stay for two adults at the resort (European plan)
- Third place: Three-course dinner for two adults at Danzante Restaurant, including bottle of house wine
