

DESERT MOUNTAIN CULINARY DIRECTOR TO PARTICIPATE IN PRESTIGIOUS LAS VEGAS FOOD EVENT

Scottsdale, Ariz. (Sept. 10, 2019) – Desert Mountain’s Director of Culinary Operations, Bertrand Bouquin, will participate in the annual Flavors of the World event at the Venetian in Las Vegas, Nevada, on Friday, September 27.

“I have been invited to cook for this magnificent event through my connections with the Master Chefs of France,” said Bouquin. “It is an honor to be part of such a group of talented professionals and I am very excited to represent the Desert Mountain community.”

The annual celebration of the culinary arts takes place poolside, under the stars, and features wines and food pairings from the Master Chefs of France. Maître Cuisinier de France, as the Master Chefs are referred to in French, is one of the most envied titles a chef can attain. The organization’s motto is “to preserve and spread the French culinary arts, encourage training in cuisine, and assist professional development.” Maîtres Cuisiniers de France are often given the highest classification in restaurant guides and are regularly mentioned in the world’s leading food and travel magazines. Only chefs who have earned this title have been asked to participate in this event. Bouquin has been a Master Chef of France since June 2018.

Event guests will experience a culinary journey with stops in 10 countries, including Italy, France, and Mexico. Various levels of ticket packages are available, including a VIP ticket that includes early admittance, a champagne toast with the Master Chefs of France, and a copy of the Master Chefs of France cookbook, which features recipes from participating chefs.

At Desert Mountain, Bouquin oversees a culinary team that operates 10 individual dining experiences—ranging from Tuscan-inspired Italian to tasty Southwestern, steakhouse, and classic American—as well as a banquet and special events operation.
